

Certified Professional Guardians (CPGs) are appointed and supervised by the Superior Court of each county in the State of Washington. CPGs serve people who have been determined by the court to be incapacitated and are unable to make financial, medical, and residential decisions without the assistance of another person. CPGs are not caregivers or family members, but serve in a professional capacity when family are unable to serve. Following are agencies and organizations where you can find a CPG for your loved one.
